FCC Commissioner Visits Austin

Updated: Wednesday, 14 Apr 2010, 5:37 PM CDT
Published : Wednesday, 14 Apr 2010, 5:37 PM CDT

Federal Communications Commissioner Robert McDowell met with dozens of leaders from Austin's tech community. McDowell spoke about the Obama administration's plans for net neutrality and how they are affected by a recent court case between the FCC and Comcast.

In that case, the court sided with Comcast, a cable television and internet provider.

"The new rules will actually interject uncertainty into the marketplace," McDowell said. "It will be litigated in smaller courts for years to come. Then people will file complaints with the FCC seeking a competitive advantage over their rivals in the marketplace.
