ATLANTA — A conservative group that supports sentencing reforms is launching an effort in Georgia.

The Right on Crime group said it will launch its state effort in Georgia on Thursday.

The nationwide initiative is endorsed by conservative figures such as former House Speaker Newt Gingrich and ex-Florida Gov. Jeb Bush.

It aims to educate lawmakers about reforms that can cut costs and reduce crime by focusing on rehabilitation for less serious crimes.

Georgia lawmakers are considering an overhaul over the next legislative session to cope with rising prison costs.
