THE ISSUE

In 1996, the United States Congress passed sweeping legislation to reform the nation's welfare through the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act (PRWORA). PRWORA ended welfare as an entitlement, instead creating a system of reciprocal obligation, requiring welfare recipients to be engaged in work activities and time-limiting the receipt of benefits. In addition, welfare reform changed the name for the welfare program from Aid to Families with Dependent Children to Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF), and funded TANF through a federal block grant to the states.

Texas has been a leader in welfare reform, passing its own version in 1995 and receiving a waiver to grandfather the state's system until 2002 when the state was forced to fully comply with PRWORA. In addition, the 78th Legislature continued the work of welfare reform, establishing stricter sanctions for non-compliance with work requirements and the states Personal Responsibility Agreement. The full-family sanction terminates the entire family's TANF grant and is not restored until the adult recipient becomes compliant. Similarly, the state terminates the Medicaid benefit for TANF adults who do not comply with work requirements.

The results of the stricter sanctions have been dramatic. The percentage of adults under sanctions every month has dropped dramatically, while the percentage of adults participating in work activities has climbed. The stronger sanctions have created an incentive for more responsible behavior, driving greater compliance with work requirements to ensure clients earn the full benefit for their family.

As a result of welfare reform and the emphasis on work, Texas has been a leader among the states for moving people off welfare and into the workplace. A July 2006 USA Today article shows the number of families receiving welfare in Texas declined by 68 percent between August 1996 and December 2005.

Through the Deficit Reduction Act of 2005 (DRA), Congress has continued to drive welfare reform, tightening definitions of work activities and recalibrating the way states demonstrate their success in reducing their welfare caseload. States are required to have 50 percent of all TANF families participating in work activities and 90 percent of two-parent families participating in work activities. The DRA changed the benchmark year for giving states credit for reducing their caseload from 1995 to 2005, thereby forcing states to more closely meet the 50 percent and 90 percent participation rates for all families and two-parent families, respectively. In 2008, Texas is expected to receive $539 million in federal funds to support the state's approximate 48,000 enrollees.

THE FACTS

- ★ Between August 1996 and December 2005, Texas reduced the number of families on welfare by 68 percent.
- ★ Stricter state sanctions established by the 78th Legislature have improved compliance.
- ★ The percent of TANF adults participating in work activities increased by 62 percent from 2003 to July of 2007.
- ★ The number of individuals sanctioned for non-cooperation with work requirements declined by 92 percent from August 2003 to April 2006.
- ★ The number of families sanctioned for non-cooperation with the state's Personal Responsibility Agreement dropped by 89 percent between September 2003 (11,478) and July 2007 (1,256).
- ★ TANF recipients are exempt from work requirements under state law if they are the caretaker for an ill or disabled child, or a single parent/caretaker with a child under age one (applies only to the first child). In addition, TANF recipients are exempt from work under HHSC rules if they are age 18 or younger, an adult unable to work due to a mental or physical disability (lasting more than 180 days), age 60 or older, an adult caring for a disabled adult, a pregnant woman not able to work, or a single grandparent age 50 or older and caring for a child under age three.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- ★ Maintain the full-family sanction for non-compliance with work requirements and the Personal Responsibility Agreement.
- ★ Maintain the adult Medicaid sanction for non-compliance with work requirements.
- ★ Review exemptions in state law and in agency rule that exempt TANF clients from engaging in required work activities.
- ★ Remove exemptions that impede the state's ability to engage recipients in work and prepare them for self sufficiency.
