

Subscribe

Help

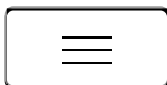

38°
H: 38°
L: 34°

 Monday, November 25, 2013

Austin American-Statesman

Sign In / Register

▼ LATEST HEADLINES ▼

HOME / NEWS / OPINION

advertisement

Resize text A | A | A

Hunker: The broken promise of renewable energy subsidies

Posted: 12:00 a.m. Sunday, Nov. 24, 2013

BY KATHLEEN HUNKER

One of the benefits of moving to Austin from downstate New York is the ability to experience and enjoy the inspiring landscape of the Texas Hill country – a blessing not easily dismissed when your home city is more concrete grey than forest green.

That is why I wish that my new home state would look more closely at some of its regulatory policies that could harm Texas' environment.

Read the complete story...

The story you're reading is premium content from the Austin American-Statesman. Subscribers get total access to all our in-depth news, digital editions and exclusive premium content. You can also buy a 24-hour digital pass or 7-day digital pass.

Read MyStatesman.com now – 24-hour digital pass

99¢ for 24-hours

Read MyStatesman.com all week – 7-day digital pass

$3.99 for 7-days

Subscribe to the Statesman for as little as 33¢ per day

View Offers

For Subscribers: Register your account for digital access.

Access Digital

For Subscribers: Sign in here if you have already registered your account.

Sign In

In this Section

Police to bars: Please don't serve Santa

Wear: Obscure committee setting Austin's path for rail

Toronto to Austin: Music partnership won't skip a beat over Ford's troubles

Texas reformers eye next effort in judicial reforms

Food trailers face health inspection challenges, but have relatively good record

Van de Putte announces run for lieutenant governor

Code violations plentiful at Austin apartments, but tickets and fines rare

Greetings from the improved Austin postcard mural

Ice, sleet expected in Central Texas on Sunday, forecasters say

\$600,000 for interim leadership at Austin facility is latest in long line of fix-it efforts