

SURVIVAL GUIDE TO HOME LEARNING

Working from home with children and need help? We gathered some of our staff's top life savers to share parent to parent.

DESIGNATE SPACES

Designate an area for learning, like a desk or kitchen table. If you have more than one kid, keep them separate to minimize distractions or arguing during class.

USE CHEAT SHEETS

Write down all your child's computer and log-in codes on a sticky note so your child has access to them at a moment's notice. Get a list (from the teacher) of your child's assignments, and use that list when checking in on progress.

DIVIDE AND CONQUER

Divvy up child care by swapping with a spouse or enlisting help from a relative or friend. Parents need breaks too!

TIME IS MONEY

Spend one-on-one time with your child. When you do have free time, play games, redecorate a room, plant a garden, read together, take dance breaks, learn about outer space, or walk to the mailbox. The options for family time are unlimited.

GROUND ZERO MEANS GROUND RULES

Notify your kids before starting a call. Posting a sign near your workspace helps them stop and think whether the interruption is necessary. Get your children used to respecting your time by making a schedule and sticking to it.

STRENGTH IN NUMBERS

Remember you are not alone! Connect with a group of moms or dads that are going through the same thing as you are. Community is essential!

FOR MORE INFORMATION ON HOME LEARNING, VISIT TEXASPOLICY.COM/LEARN