

Alfonso Aguilar

President, Latino Partnership for Conservative Principles and International Human Rights Group

Alfonso Aguilar is the President of the Latino Partnership for Conservative Principles, a Washington, DC based advocacy group, which promotes conservative values and ideals within the Latino community and works to integrate Latinos into fuller and more active participation and leadership in the conservative movement. He is also the President of the International Human Rights Group, a non-profit legal foundation accredited before the Organization of American States (OAS), which seeks to defend and protect political rights, religious freedom, and the dignity of the human person through the Inter-American System of Human Rights. He also serves as an advisor to the Holy See's Mission to the OAS and has been a member of the Vatican's delegation to the most recent General Assemblies of the OAS.

Mr. Aguilar is the former Chief of the U.S. Office of Citizenship in the administration of President George W. Bush. He is also a well-known policy and political analyst. He is regularly quoted in major national newspapers and digital media outlets and appears frequently in national radio and TV shows.
