Morgan was born and raised in Texas, moved with her family to the Houston area in 1998, and graduated from Katy High School.

While in college, Morgan met her husband and they married in 2008, after his enlistment into the United States Air Force. While serving in the military, they were stationed in Colorado Springs, Colorado. After serving three combat deployments to the middle east, her husband separated from the military and the couple moved back to Texas to raise a family.

Today, Morgan is a proud mother to three wonderful young children whom she has had the honor of staying home to raise, while being an active participant in every step of their education.

However, in 2019, when her oldest son entered into the public education system, she began to notice issues with public education. As such, Morgan decided to run for school board to serve her community and the families in it by being a vocal advocate for accountability, truth, virtue, and exemplary educational opportunities to every Texas student.

Since winning her 2023 election, by an overwhelming majority, Morgan has:
