

Cody Wilde

Senior Vice President, Correctional Programs, Prison Fellowship

Cody Wilde oversees Prison Fellowship's correctional programming in approximately 1,200 prisons across all 50 states. Cody previously served as an Academy director at Lino Lakes Correctional Facility, as a regional director for the Midwest and Great Lakes territory, and as national director of operations for the Academy team.

Originally from North Dakota, Cody is a former officer in the United States Army. He received his undergraduate degree in history from Northwestern College in St. Paul and holds graduate degrees in theology and international affairs from Bethel Seminary and the Bush School of Government at Texas A&M University. He is a student in a business management certificate program at the University of Texas, Austin.

Cody is married with three children and lives in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, where he serves on the elder board at his local church.